◆ Introduction of the Talk

Gifted students are better developed than their non-gifted peers in different aspects, for instance, intelligence, academic aptitude in various subject areas, creative thinking, talents in visual or performing arts, leadership, or psychomotor ability, etc. Other than their gifted aspects, gifted students should also pursue their development in more other areas. In this talk, the speaker will let student members understanding concepts of character strengths in positive psychology and ways to develop or further improve their character strengths. Hence, student members could have an idea which character strengths they would like to develop or further improve through their whole person development journey. Q&A session will be provided by the end of the talk.
