 Financial Seminar (Level I)

Why Should We Learn Finance?

Dr Mok Ka Ming, Edwin

Lecturer, The Department of Finance
Director of Quantitative Finance Program
The Chinese University of Hong Kong

Application Deadline
16 June 2023
12:00 noon

Intended Learning Outcomes

Upon completion of the programme, participants should be able to:

1. appreciate the significance of financial literacy;
2. apply fundamental principles in making financial decisions;
3. explain the basic purposes of Bloomberg terminals;
4. explain the basic trading principles.

◆ Introduction

Having a robust comprehension of personal finance is crucial in the modern era, given the higher prevalence of financial scams compared to previous times. Hence, the capacity to effectively handle financial resources, make wise investments, and have good saving habits are vital for financial stability and success. However, traditional educational systems often neglect financial literacy.

To address this gap, our seminar endeavors to equip young people with practical knowledge and exposure to appreciate the significance of financial literacy, comprehend the fundamental principles underlying financial decision-making, understand the current financial markets through Bloomberg terminals, and learn the basic trading principles through trading simulation.
