Introductory to China's Underwater Archaeology and Maritime Silk Road

Institute of Hong Kong Underwater Archaeology Research

Application Deadline

22 Sep 2023

12:00 noon

Intended Learning Outcomes

Upon completion of the programme, participants should be able to:

1. learn and describe basic knowledge of China's Underwater Archeology and Maritime Silk Road;
2. broaden interest and career pathway choices in archaeology

◆ Introduction

Chinese archaeology has just gone through the first 100 years. "Nanhai No. 1" is an important milestone in China's underwater archaeology, marking that China's underwater archaeology can develop independently. In recent years, the "Belt and Road" has always become the focus of the world's attention, among which the "Maritime Silk Road" is one of the important links, reflecting the interaction between ancient cultures, religions, and so on between the East and the West.

In this talk, students can understand the relationship between underwater archaeology in China and Maritime Silk Road. Learning about the cultural exchange between China and overseas, their perspective and interest in archaeological research could be broadened.
