Intended Learning Outcomes

At the end of the programme, students should be able to:

1. Broaden students' mindset and brainstorm social problem and potential resources.
2. Acquire project development skills and receive feedback to refine and improve their projects
3. Gain practical knowledge of social project production and understand the expected outcomes of their projects
4. Solidify their ideas and able to suggest, or even measure, the expected outcome of the project

◆ Introduction

Have you ever thought about what you can do for this world?

This programme provides students with the chance to collaborate, engage in interdisciplinary learning, gain practical experience, tackle real-world issues, and address societal challenges. Through activities such as small group discussions, field trips, interactions with professionals, and research studies, students will develop an understanding of the needs of marginalized communities and the challenges faced by social enterprises. Additionally, they will explore the principles of design thinking and have the chance to initiate and execute their own project.

We invite you to embark on this exciting journey towards becoming a social innovator. Join us in this endeavour!
