2. exhibit proficiency in creating unpredictable and fluid sounds through interactive and responsive performance;
3. apply concepts related to music, composition, and potential applications in music therapy;
4. develop an understanding of diverse musical styles and enhance collaborative skills in artistic endeavors.

◆ Gifted Programme Introduction

In a drum circle session, students use various percussion instruments to build harmonious music. Participants start by creating a unified rhythm, taking turns altering tempo and volume while layering complementary beats. Each individual then improvises a solo within the established rhythm before transitioning to free play and musical exchanges. Another activity involves expressing emotions through drumming; group members convey their feelings through music, prompting discussions on emotional connections to music. Exploring Chinese and Western instruments encourages mixing sounds, improvisation, and music-image associations. Lastly, participants learn diverse music styles and rhythmic patterns to broaden their musical repertoire.
